

Online Safety at Home

Why Talk About Online Safety?

Online safety starts long before children can read or write.

By Reception age, many children:

- Use tablets independently
- Watch videos on streaming platforms
- Play games online
- Access content through siblings' devices

Our aim is not to stop technology, but to help children develop safe and healthy habits from the very beginning.

Think of technology like sweets...

A little can be enjoyable and beneficial.

Too much can affect:

- Sleep
- Attention and concentration
- Physical activity
- Family interactions

Healthy habits include:

- ✓ Screens used in shared family spaces
- ✓ Plenty of play, conversation and outdoor activities
- ✓ Screen-free mealtimes
- ✓ No devices at bedtime
- ✓ Adults modelling healthy habits too

Key message: Children learn more from what we do than what we say.

Healthy Online Habits

Recommended Screen Time

There is no single perfect amount.

Instead, ask:

- ✓ Is my child sleeping well?
- ✓ Are they active every day?
- ✓ Is there plenty of time for play and family interaction?
- ✓ Is screen use becoming a battle?

As a guide:

- Keep screen use balanced with active play and real-world experiences.
- Avoid screens in the hour before bedtime where possible.
- Younger children benefit most from using screens alongside an adult.

Remember: Quality matters more than simply counting minutes.

Choosing Safe Apps

Not all children's apps are suitable for young children.

Before downloading, ask:

Does it:

- ✓ Encourage learning or creativity?
- ✓ Have clear parental controls?
- ✓ Avoid chat functions?
- ✓ Avoid encouraging children to make purchases?
- ✓ Avoid showing adverts?

Good examples:

- CBeebies apps
- BBC children's content
- Teach Your Monster to Read
- Numberblocks and Alphablocks apps

Understanding PEGI Ratings

PEGI ratings help parents decide if a game is suitable.

PEGI is about content, not difficulty.

A child may be able to play a game but still be too young for its content.

- PEGI 3 = suitable for young children
- PEGI 7 = may contain mild frightening scenes
- PEGI 12+ and above = not suitable for young children

Important:

If a game has a higher PEGI rating than your child's age, there is usually a reason.

Always check the rating before downloading or buying.

Parent and Carer Monitoring

The most effective safety tool is not an app...

It's a trusted adult.

We recommend:

- ✓ Know what your child is watching
- ✓ Know which games they are playing
- ✓ Use parental controls
- ✓ Keep devices in family rooms
- ✓ Check privacy settings
- ✓ Talk regularly about what they do online

Ask:

"What was your favourite thing you watched today?"

rather than

"Have you done anything unsafe online?"

Our Top 5 Takeaways

1. Keep screens in shared family spaces.
2. Choose age-appropriate apps and games.
3. Check PEGI ratings before downloading games.
